THE people in Puna have reason to believe that Sheriff Andrews meddles too much with the dispensation of justice by the District Magistrate of that district. They want to know how it is, especially when a police officer is caught red handed in crime, that the Sheriff takes such an interest in staying judgement. They also fail to understand the justice of a system which under orders from the Sheriff's office secures convictions in that district, on the theory that af the defendant has not had a fair deal he can get it by appealing to a higher court.

ONE of the chief reasons why Sheriff Andrews is unfit to be sheriff in a free country is that he tries to dominate the District Courts. He does this with such persistence that he often turns the scales for or against a defendant on the score of friendship or enmity or self interest, as the case may be.
